

They mean business!

Alex Reynolds is serious about his form during belt testing.

A University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee engineering student by day, Peter D. Sorce is a third degree black belt in Tae Kwon Do at night when he teaches the discipline for the Recreation Department. Several times a year, students who are deemed ready perform the techniques they've learned before judges. Those passing the scrutiny earn belts of various colors which identify the level of achievement of the wearer.

Crystal Lee breaks a board for judges during belt testing day at the middle school.

Instructor Peter Sorce holds a target for a student to kick during a warmup exercise.